Frames: a Colloquium in Linguistics, Philosophy and Economics

June 6-9, 2006

Bologna, Italy

Aula G. Prodi, P. zza S. Giovanni in Monte 2

We are pleased to inform you that the Centre for Theoretical and Applied Linguistics, the Faculty of Arts and Humanities, the Department of Economics and the Department of Philosophy of the Alma Mater Studiorum - University of Bologna will jointly sponsor the conference Frames: a Colloquium in Linguistics, Philosophy and Economics.

Framing is increasingly considered a central feature in linguistic interaction, in social communication, and in the application of intelligence.

The colloquium will explore research lines pursued in a variety of disciplines, and primarily in linguistics, philosophy and economics. Our objective will be to encourage mutual awareness, cross-fertilization and the identification of new problem areas and analytical tools.

The colloquium will focus, although not exclusively, upon issues relevant at the same time in manifold fields of investigation, such as the relationship between framing and non-monotonic reasoning, context dependence, the dynamics of meaningful patterns in interactive situations.

It is hoped that the colloquium will stimulate a fresh outlook on classical (and central) issues such as the evolution of natural languages, the dynamics of collective knowledge, the possibility of coordination.
